The P.U.D.--Revolutionary Foreskin Restoration Device

Now you can restore your foreskin--at home --at your pace--and lengthen your penis in the process!

Roland Clark was seven years old when he first noticed the difference. In kindergarten in the late 1940's, his teacher had a strict bathroom policy--raise your hand and wait for another student to raise his hand, then you accompany each other to the restroom.

It was in this paired bathroom arrangement that Roland realized that all boys were not created equal. While most boys had a penis like his, others sported a fleshy covering over the glans. He made a mental note of who these boys were and quickly raised his hand when the "uncuts" expressed the need to go to the bathroom. This gave him ample opportunity to visually explore the differences.

One day he summoned up the courage and asked his mother why some boys were this way. She matter-of-factly stated that they were not circumcised. Most parents, she explained, had their sons circumcised for cleanliness. Anyway, a man didn't need that useless tissue anyway, she added. Roland was secretly furious, wondering why his parents would deprive him of a part of his body.

A fascination--perhaps obsession--with the foreskin developed, and young Roland continued to wonder what it would be like to have a foreskin. This led to normal adolescent exploration with genital stimulation and sexual curiosity.

And the band played on

A few years later, while enrolled in a junior high band class, Roland couldn't help but notice the erotic concave shape of his trombone mouthpiece. In the privacy of his bedroom, he removed the mouthpiece, positioned it over his penis, and taped it in place. It was instant magic. Finally, he had an idea what a real foreskin felt like, but the trombone mouthpiece, while sensual in its own right, was too shallow to hold the entire glans, so Roland began considering other candidate devices. Back in the band room, he found his answer.

Languishing in the corner, was an old, dusty tuba. He examined the mouthpiece and found it to be just the right size. He cleaned it off, tried it on and taped it place. He wore this device off and on over a period of years and claims that approximately 25% of his foreskin regrowth is attributable to this tuba mouthpiece.

Foreskin--out of the closet

Years passed by, but not his fascination for foreskin. In the 1980's circumcision became a hot topic in the media and on the talkshows. Along with the open discussion of circumcision came the revelation that an underground group of men were regenerating foreskins on their own.

Roland made contact with these groups and quickly learned that the desire for a foreskin was shared by
